Sommario/riassunto	The specific objective of The Canadian Journal of Sociology/Cahiers canadiens de sociologie (CJS) is the dissemination of original and significant research and theory produced largely, but not exclusively, by Canadian researchers in Sociology and related disciplines. Our policy is to represent the diversity of theoretical and methodological orientations within Sociology. We also encourage an interdisciplinary focus, with articles and commentaries from demographers, historians, political scientists, economists, communications specialists, and criminologists. The strength of the CJS, above all, has been its unwavering commitment to being a research journal which advances knowledge in Sociology, to excellence, to scholarly diversity, to intellectual exchange and internationality.
