| Sommario/riassunto      | In each of Plato's "dialogues of definition" (Euthyphro, Laches, Meno,Charmides, Lysis, Republic I, Hippias Major), Socrates motivatesphilosophical discussion by posing a question of the form "What is F-ness?" Yet these dialogues are notorious for coming up empty.Socrates' interlocutors repeatedly fail to deliver satisfactory answers.Thus, the dialogues of definition are often considered negative- emptyof any positive philosophical content. Justin C. Clark resists thenegative reading, arguing that the dialogues of definition containpositive "Socratic" answers. In order to see the positive theory, however, | one must recognize what Clark calls the "dual function" of the "What is F-ness?" question. Socrates is not looking for a single type of answer. Rather, Socrates is looking for two distinct types of answers. The "What is F-ness?" question serves as a springboard for two types of investigation- conceptual and causal. The key to understanding any of the dialogues of definition, therefore, is to decipher between them. Clark offers a way to do just that, at once resolving interpretive issues in Socratic philosophy, providing systematic interpretations of the negative endings, and generating important new readings of the Charmides and Lysis, whilst casting further doubt on the authenticity of the Hippias Major. Justin C. Clark is Assistant professor of philosophy at Hamilton College.
