Sommario/riassunto

The final issue of the year always has a theme, and it is no coincidence that in 2005 the theme is electronic document and records management systems (EDRMS). When the Editorial Advisory Board considered potential themes at its annual meeting last year it felt it would be particularly appropriate to explore whether or not EDRMS had delivered what they promised and/or what had been hoped for, given the flurry of activity on EDRMS procurement and implementation in the lead up to freedom of information legislation in the UK. Although we did not intend to focus exclusively on the UK, all of the contributions
