Sommario/riassunto	The articles in this volume come from the section »Historical Pragmatics and Historical Variety Linguistics. Scientific Practice and Methodology - Divergences and Convergences «, which will be presented on September 29th and 30th, 2003 at XXVIII. German Romanistentag took place in Kiel. The conception and planning of this section was based on the insight that historical pragmatics and historical variety linguistics have numerous points of contact and overlap in their objects and methods, but have developed in quite different ways institutionally and in their research traditions. Against this background, the section's contributions aim to name and comment on the convergences and divergences of the two disciplines within the framework of a reflected dialogue.
