Sommario/riassunto	An analysis of the successive reports prepared on PEC 96/92 allowed us to identify three main dimensions of judicial reform. There is, first, the problem of constitutional political jurisdiction. The second dimension of the reform deals with the existence and effectiveness of mechanisms for the control and inspection of the organs of the justice system. Finally, the third dimension contemplates the organizational and structural aspects according to its capacity to expand or reduce access to Justice and the democratization of the Judiciary.
