| Sommario/riassunto | Based on the law and interpreting it in the best legal tradition and knowledge, the author examines the legal responsibility of the main 'agents' of the Unified Health System - on the one hand, the State, with its three levels of government; on the other hand, health professionals and producers of services and inputs - in order finally to dwell on the responsibility of SUS public servants. Despite the technical rigor of dealing with these issues, the book is intended not only for lawyers working in the field, but for all professionals, administrators and researchers involved with the health system. |
