Sommario/riassunto	In the summer of 1900, friends Jan Bernardsz, Willem Herveldt and Malik Kaushee make their way through northwestern Alaska. They make their way down the Yukon River to the Kuskokwim Valley to purchase pelts from trappers. At the same time, their friend, photographer Jim White, discovers the wildlife in the badlands of Montana (USA). When rustlers unexpectedly cross his path, Jim White decides to follow this ""hole in the wall" gang. A historical journey adventure that deserves to be read. In the past, Renee Busschers (1956) wrote articles for club and school newspapers. Her fascination for writing resulted in the publication of books and Mush Alyeska . In her book she combines fact and fiction based on historical events. The quest for useful information is something she perceives as a pleasant journey through the past. During these explorations she gathers special historical facts that she uses in her books.
