Sommario/riassunto	This volume deals with "Global public goods in interdisciplinary perspectives". Scientists from different disciplines investigate how global public goods can be protected or promoted. These goods include, for example, world peace, the global climate or climate change, global pollution, the Internet, clean water and air, global garbage tourism, global justice and global standards for the processes of globalization. These goods, their protection and their promotion are part of a world worth living in. They are also the subject of our shared responsibility towards current and future generations.
