Sommario/riassunto	This collective work explores the themes of religious coexistence and the broaching of religious frontiers in Europe during the 16th, 17th and 18th Centuries. It intends to open new areas for discussion on a European level through the bias of a dialogue between researchers subscribing to highly different national traditions (France, Netherlands, Switzerland, and Germany). It acts through the contributions gathered here to analyse the possibilities and different methods of interfaith contact by using as a departure point the experience of religious differences: The experience garnered by diverse social actors – ecclesiastical, magisterial, academics and nobility.
