Sommario/riassunto	The University has always accompanied society in its social and cultural evolution. Since the medieval genesis of Higher Education Institutions, this evolution has always been associated with a suitable urban-architectural format, often inspired by visions of "utopia in action". In recent times, the University has experienced valuable impulses towards innovation and excellence, which have served as support for very interesting projects, especially in Spain. One of the conceptual tools used to undertake transformations towards the excellence of university groups has been the "Didactic Campus", under whose philosophy of planning and action, multiple campus designs and University-City relations have crystallized throughout the national university territory .
