

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910141561103321
Autore	Sen Amartya
Titolo	Peace and democratic society [[electronic resource] /] / edited by Amartya Sen
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Cambridge, : OpenBook Publishers, 2011
ISBN	1-906924-48-1 1-906924-39-2 2-8218-1711-8 1-906924-41-4
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (155 pages.)
Collana	Open reports series , 2399-6676 ; ; volume 1
Altri autori (Persone)	SenAmartya
Disciplina	303.6609171241
Soggetti	Peace - Political aspects Democracy
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record. At foot of title: Commonwealth Secretariat.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	pt. I. Violence and civil society -- pt. II. Civil paths to peace.
Sommario/riassunto	"Recent acts of terrorism and the current unrest in the Middle East remind us how important it is to understand the relationship between peace and democracy. In an insightful introductory essay to this report, Nobel laureate Amartya Sen challenges widely accepted explanations for violence. He makes a plea for a global, multilateral debate on the causes of conflict, and an understanding of the multiple identities of the individuals involved. The introductory essay draws on the findings of the Commonwealth Commission on Respect and Understanding, which was chaired by Sen, and established to promote mutual communication and understanding among all faiths and communities in the Commonwealth. Its timely report, "Civil Paths to Peace", suggests that governments, media and educators—indeed, everyone—must take the time to understand the complexities around violent behaviour and its causes, without prejudging what these might be."--Publisher's website.