Sommario/riassunto

Soixante-dix ans après la fin des hostilités, les tragédies et les questions liées à la Seconde Guerre mondiale continuent d'occuper les esprits et la culture, la création et le commentaire. Certaines de ces productions contestent des vérités admises, et jusqu'à la possibilité d'un accord. Des spécialistes d'origine et d'institutions très diverses sont réunis ici pour étudier un corpus qui va de l'après-guerre à nos jours, de Maurice Bardèche à Armand Gatti, couvrant tous les genres littéraires ainsi que les arts du spectacle. Se sont joints à ces chercheurs l'historien Henry Rousso, les écrivains Laurent Binet, Pascal Bruckner et Yannick Haenel. Loin de l'unanimité souvent trompeuse, les points de vue peuvent différer, ou diverger radicalement. Trois axes successifs relancent le débat et l'ordonnent : les hantises et recompositions imposées par le traumatisme, les écritures de l'Histoire aux prises avec la fiction, les implications et engagements suscités par l'événement.
