Sommario/riassunto	SummaryThe philosopher Blaise Pascal called man "the supreme paradox," because compared to all other creatures, he is both the most magnificent and the most miserable. What did Pascal mean? The answer goes to the heart of what the Bible says about man.Man is created in the image of God, but the Bible also tells us that man has fallen into sin and become corrupt. In Are People Basically Good?, Dr. R.C. Sproul explores the nature of mankind by looking at what it means to be made in the image of God and exploring the nature and effects of the fall. Chapters ·The Supreme Paradox ·The Image of God ·The Duality of Man ·The Reality of Our Sin ·The Depth of Our Sin ·The Extent of Our SinResourcesPart of the Crucial Questions booklet series
