

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910155057403321
Titolo	Education of military dependent students : select assessments // Hernick A. Demello, editor
Pubbl/distr/stampa	New York : , : Nova Publishers, , 2013 ©2013
ISBN	1-62618-481-X
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (192 pages) : illustrations
Collana	Education in a Competitive and Globalizing World Military and Veteran Issues
Disciplina	371.82
Soggetti	Children of military personnel - Education - United States Charter schools - United States - Evaluation Children with disabilities - Education - United States - Evaluation
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Includes index.
Nota di contenuto	Charter schools : guidance needed for military base schools on startup and operational issues / United States Government Accountability Office -- Report on charter schools on military installations / Department of Defense -- Education of military dependent students : better information needed to assess student performance / United States Government Accountability Office -- Military dependent students : better oversight needed to improve services for children with special needs / United States Government Accountability Office.
Sommario/riassunto	Family concerns about education affect readiness and retention of military personnel, according to the Department of Defense (DOD). The majority of children of military families in the United States attend public schools. A 2008 DOD study recommended offering military families a public charter school option in areas with poorly-performing local schools. This book examines the guidance needed for military base schools on start-up and operational issues; a review of charter schools on military installations; and a study recommending better oversight to improve services for military dependent students with special needs.

