

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910157419803321
Autore	McMaster Richard K
Titolo	Scotch-Irish Merchants in Colonial America [[electronic resource]]
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Belfast, : Ulster Historical Foundation, 2009
ISBN	1-908448-12-1
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (600 p.)
Disciplina	973.308
Soggetti	Scots-Irish - History - 18th century - United States Flax industry - History - 18th century - United States Merchants - History - 18th century Gender & Ethnic Studies Social Sciences Ethnic & Race Studies Electronic books. Ulster (Northern Ireland and Ireland) Emigration and immigration History Ireland Emigration and immigration History United States Emigration and immigration History
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di contenuto	Cover; Title Page; Dedication; Copyright; Contents; Abbreviations; Acknowledgements; Introduction; 1 "Novel Traffics"; 2 Scowbankers and Redemptioners; 3 The Flaxseed Trade Begins; 4 Transatlantic Partners - Patterns of Trade; 5 Into the Backcountry; 6 From Ulster to the Carolinas; 7 Merchants in Politics; 8 A Scotch-Irish Boom Town; 9 Emigration at High Tide; 10 Patterns of Emigration; 11 Non-Importation, Non-Exportation, and the Flaxseed Trade; Bibliography; Index
Sommario/riassunto	During the course of the eighteenth century, migration from Europe and Africa shaped the emerging consciousness and culture of the American Colonies. Whether free, bond servant, or slave, migrants brought skills and folkways from their motherlands, contributing to the agricultural and commercial development as well as to the peopling of North America. Emigrants from Ulster, the northern province of Ireland, did all of this and more. Ulster exported an economy. This new book tells the story of the transatlantic links between Ulster and America in the eighteenth century. The author draw
