Sommario/riassunto	This book is a poignant memoir by Sidney Stewart, an American soldier and survivor of the Bataan Death March during World War II. It chronicles his harrowing experiences as a prisoner of war under Japanese captivity in the Philippines and Japan. Stewart provides a detailed account of the brutal conditions and the psychological and physical challenges faced by American soldiers. Through his narrative, he explores themes of survival, resilience, and the eventual understanding of cultural differences between captors and captives. The book serves as a historical document revealing the lesser-known aspects of the Pacific War, making it a significant work for readers interested in military history and personal stories of wartime endurance.
