Sommario/riassunto	&amp;lt;p&amp;gt;People simply will not accept the fact that there is such a thing as a homicidal mind, Truman Capote once said, People who would kill as easily as they would write a bad check. But people like this do exist- and in &amp;lt;i&amp;gt;Homicidal,&amp;lt;/i&amp;gt; journalist and crime writer Paul Alexander profiles one of the most brutal homicidal minds in criminal history.&amp;lt;/p&amp;gt;&amp;lt;p&amp;gt;According to allegations, Lonnie Franklin Jr. killed at least ten women-maybe more-in the Los Angeles area over 25 years. Because of serious mistakes in the LAPDs handling of the case, Franklin stayed active for decades-a terrifyingly normal serial killer next door who met his victims mostly through random encounters.&amp;lt;/p&amp;gt;&amp;lt;p&amp;gt;The best-selling author of true crime titles &amp;lt;i&amp;gt;Accused, Murdered, &amp;lt;/i&amp;gt;and &amp;lt;i&amp;gt;Mistried,&amp;lt;/i&amp;gt; Alexander delves deep into law enforcement records and collects never-before-heard firsthand accounts to cast new light on this complicated case. Combining the attention to detail of a crime journalist with the eloquent style of a literary master, Alexander will leave you wondering-

could you recognize the serial killer next door?
