Sommario/riassunto	This book provides a detailed historical account of the Sixth Marine Division's involvement in the Battle of Okinawa during World War II. Written by Major Phillips D. Carleton of the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve, the monograph is based on his personal observations and interviews with officers and men who participated in the campaign. The narrative covers various battles, including those on the Motobu Peninsula, Naha, and the Oroku Peninsula. The book aims to document the experiences and strategies of Marine Corps units, offering insights into their operations, challenges, and achievements. It serves as a resource for military historians and enthusiasts interested in World War II and Marine Corps history.
