Sommario/riassunto	The book 'Itinéraires et Contacts de Cultures', Volume 12, serves as a comprehensive exploration of colonial literature and its interactions with African literature. Edited by Jean-Louis Joubert, it focuses on the colonial novel and its thematic and historical contexts. The work discusses literary contributions and critiques from various scholars, including Alain Ricard and Léon Debertry, examining the colonial narrative's complexities and underlying ideologies. It provides insights into the portrayal of Africa in literature, highlighting the tension between colonial perspectives and indigenous voices. The book is intended for an academic audience, particularly those interested in Francophone and comparative literary studies, offering a critical examination of cultural exchanges and literary encounters during the colonial era.
