Sommario/riassunto

This book, 'Saipan: The Beginning of the End' by Major Carl W. Hoffman, is an operational monograph detailing the United States Marine Corps' involvement in the Battle of Saipan during World War II. Published by the Historical Division of the U.S. Marine Corps, it provides a comprehensive narrative of the planning and execution of the Saipan invasion, a pivotal operation in the Pacific War. The narrative covers strategic planning, military tactics, and the execution of combined arms operations, highlighting the challenges faced by U.S. forces and their eventual triumph over Japanese defenses. The work is intended for military students and general readers interested in military history, offering insights into the strategic significance of Saipan in undermining Japanese defenses and contributing to the Allied victory in the Pacific.
