Sommario/riassunto

The book 'The Fall of the Philippines' by Louis Morton is a detailed historical account of the United States Army's involvement in the defense of the Philippines during World War II. It covers prewar preparations, the Japanese invasion, the withdrawal to Bataan, and the eventual surrender of American and Filipino forces. The work delves into the strategic plans of both the American and Japanese military, the challenges faced by the Allied forces, and the impact of the conflict on the region. The book is aimed at military historians, students, and enthusiasts interested in World War II history, providing a comprehensive analysis of this critical campaign in the Pacific Theater.
