

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910220082403321
Autore	Cliff Roger
Titolo	U.S.-China relations after resolution of Taiwan's status // Roger Cliff, David A. Shlapak
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Santa Monica, CA, : RAND Corp., 2007
ISBN	1-281-18108-0 9786611181086 0-8330-4266-1
Edizione	[1st ed.]
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (39 p.)
Altri autori (Persone)	ShlapakDavid A
Disciplina	327.73051
Soggetti	National security - Taiwan China Military policy 21st century United States Military policy 21st century Taiwan Foreign relations China China Foreign relations Taiwan United States Foreign relations China China Foreign relations United States United States Foreign relations Taiwan Taiwan Foreign relations United States
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. [23]-24).
Nota di contenuto	Cover; Preface; Contents; Figure and Tables; Summary; Acknowledgements; Chapter One - Near-Term Prospects; Chapter Two - Longer-Term Possibilities; Nonviolent Outcomes; Conflict Involving the United States; Conflict Without U.S. Intervention; Chapter Three - Observations; Bibliography
Sommario/riassunto	Although the question of Taiwan's status is unlikely to be resolved soon, considering the various possible outcomes and how they might affect U.S.-China relations is useful. A total of ten distinct trajectories for the resolution of the cross-strait relationship can be identified, with greatly varying implications for U.S.-China relations. Unsurprisingly, the impact of peaceful outcomes, including continued peaceful irresolution, is both more predictable and generally better for relations between Washington and Beijing. If China uses force against Taiwan, however, subsequent U.S.-China relations
