

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910220095003321
Autore	Treverton Gregory F
Titolo	Reorganizing U.S. domestic intelligence : assessing the options / / Gregory F. Treverton
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Santa Monica, CA, : RAND, 2008
ISBN	1-281-73675-9 0-8330-4821-X
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (151 p.)
Collana	Rand Corporation monograph series
Disciplina	363.325/1630973
Soggetti	Intelligence service - United States Terrorism - United States - Prevention Terrorism - Government policy - United States
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. [113]-125).
Nota di contenuto	Introduction: domestic intelligence in context -- Defining domestic intelligence -- A range of options for improving domestic intelligence -- Assessing structural options -- Weighing pros and cons: an approach for considering the uncertain costs and benefits of organizational change -- Conclusions: the path forward.
Sommario/riassunto	One of the questions in the fight against terrorism is whether the United States needs a dedicated domestic intelligence agency separate from law enforcement, on the model of many comparable democracies. To examine this issue, Congress directed that the Department of Homeland Security perform an independent study on the feasibility of creating a counterterrorism intelligence agency and the department turned to the RAND Corporation for this analysis but asked it specifically not to make a recommendation. This volume lays out the relevant considerations for creating such an agency. It draws on a