| Sommario/riassunto | B.J. Pinkerton things its great that her mother is running for mayor! But theres never been a woman mayor before, and her mother is a Democrat while the rest of the town is Republican. It takes a lot of hard | work to make an underdog into a winner. In fact, ten-year-old B.J., her sister and three brothers, her father, and the dog have to make some big sacrifices like having hot dogs for dinner every night. But can her mother really win? If so, why did her campaign manager say she's a sure loser? And why does he spend so much time with the other candidate? B.J. smells a rat, and she's determined to find out who it is!

Sommario/riassunto	Domenica Preysing offers a critical reading of "transitional justice" that focuses on political dynamics in post-revolutionary Tunisia, from the ouster of president Ben Ali in January 2011 until the adoption of transitional justice bill in December 2013. She explores the role, structure and characteristics of evolving transitional justice policy discourse to provide a better understanding of how, by who, and to what effect the policy label “transitional justice” is progressively filled with meaning. She shows that conflicting interpretations of both the past and the present have been both deeply embedded in and an expression of the dynamic context of domestic political transformation, as old and new elites struggle over the political identity and direction of post-Ben Ali Tunisia. Contents Transitional Justice Discourse in Transition Post-structuralist Political Discourse Theory From Discourse Theory to Discourse Analysis A Brief Chronology of Political Transition in Tunisia “Transitional Justice” in Political Transition Lustration: The Discursive Struggle over Political Exclusion Reparations: The Discursive Struggle for Recognition Target Groups Researchers and students in political science and Middle East Studies Practitioners in the field of foreign policy and development cooperation The Author Domenica Preysing has spent several years working in development policy, research and consulting with a special focus on the Middle East.
