| Sommario/riassunto      | This book is the first full-length study of HIV/AIDS work in relation togovernment and NGOs. In the early 2000s, Pakistan's response toHIV/AIDS was scaled-up and declared an area of urgent intervention.This response was funded by international donors requiring prevention,care and support services to be contracted out to NGOs - a globalpolicy considered particularly important in Pakistan where the high riskpopulations are criminalized by the state. Based on unparalleledethnographic access to government bureaucracies and their dealings | with NGOs, Qureshi examines how global policies were translated by local actors and how they responded to the evolving HIV/AIDS crisis. The book encourages readers to reconsider the orthodoxy of policies regarding public-private partnership by critiquing the resulting changes in the bureaucracy, civil society and public goods. It is a mustread for students, scholars and practitioners concerned with neoliberal agendas in global health and development.
