

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910426045303321
Autore	Preston John <1945-1994, >
Titolo	Coronavirus, class and mutual aid in the United Kingdom // John Preston, Rhiannon Firth
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Cham, Switzerland : , : Palgrave Macmillan, , [2020] ©2020
ISBN	3-030-57714-7
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (vii, 116 pages)
Disciplina	305.5620941
Soggetti	Working class - Great Britain - Social conditions
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Nota di contenuto	1. Introduction -- 2. The Viracene and Capitalism -- 3. Classed Practices: Pandemic Preparedness in the UK -- 4. Mutual Aid, Anarchist Preparedness and COVID-19. .
Sommario/riassunto	This book considers how the UK government's response to the recent COVID-19 pandemic disadvantages the working class, and how mutual aid, based on anarchist principles, can be used as a force for social change. The authors draw on Marxist and anarchist thought in class theory and social movement analysis to demonstrate that the virus and its material and discursive consequences are an active part of continuing class struggle and class interpolation. Preston and Firth examine how plans for quarantine and social isolation systematically work against the needs of the working class, and rely on classed assumptions about how markets and altruism operate. In the face of neoliberal methods of dealing with a pandemic, ranging from marketization, disaster capitalism, to a strengthening of the State, Coronavirus, Class and Mutual Aid in the UK explains how radical alternatives such as social movements and mutual aid can be implemented to better cope with current and future crises.