Record Nr. Autore Titolo Pubbl/distr/stampa	UNINA9910449930803321 Tichenor Veronica Jaris <1963-> Earning more and getting less [[electronic resource] ] : why successful wives can't buy equality / / Veronica Jaris Tichenor New Brunswick, N.J., : Rutgers University Press, c2005
ISBN	1-280-46290-6 9786610462902 0-8135-3788-6
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (238 p.)
Disciplina	306.81
Soggetti	Marriage - Psychological aspects Equality - Psychological aspects Married people - Psychology Sex differences (Psychology) Power (Social sciences) Wages - Women Electronic books.
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. 205-211) and index.
Nota di contenuto	Higher-earning wives : swimming against the tide Thinking about gender and power in marriage Gendered bargain : why wives can't trade their money for housework Dollar rich and power poor : why wives don't control the money Calling the shots : why wives' decision-making power is limited Negotiating identity and power Are they happy? : managing tensions and disappointments Floating along for the ride? : higher-earning wives and the prospects for gender change.
Sommario/riassunto	For nearly two decades the wage gap between men and women has remained virtually unchanged. Women continue to earn, on average, 80 cents for every dollar that men earn. Yet despite persistent discrimination in wages, studies are also beginning to show that a growing number of women are out-earning their husbands. Nationwide, nearly one-third of working women are the chief breadwinners in their families. The trend is particularly pronounced among the demographic of highly educated women. Does this increase in earnings, however, equate to a shift in power dynamics between husbands and wives? In Earning More and Getting Less, sociologist Veronica Jaris Tichenor shows how, historically, men have derived a great deal of power over financial and household decisions by bringing home all (or most) of the family's income. Yet, financial superiority has not been a similar source of power for women. Tichenor demonstrates how wives, instead of using their substantial incomes to negotiate more egalitarian relationships, enable their husbands to perpetuate male dominance within the family. Weaving personal accounts, in-depth interviews, and compelling narrative, this important study reveals disturbing evidence that the conventional power relations defined by gender are powerful enough to undermine hierarchies defined by money. Earning More and Getting Less is essential reading in sociology, psychology, and family and gender studies.

1.