Sommario/riassunto	This paper reviews, assesses and evaluates the performance of sub- Saharan African countries towards achieving the international development goals and targets set by the United Nations, UN

Millennium Development Goals and the Agenda for Action of the 2nd Tokyo International Conference on African Development. Africa's recent economic performance is a reflection of the policies it has pursued since the 1960's. It summarises the progress of sub-Saharan African countries with a view to providing a clearer understanding of the constraints they face in reaching the goals, with a special focus on the e
