

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910450273203321
Autore	Kramer Larry <1958->
Titolo	The people themselves [[electronic resource] ] : popular constitutionalism and judicial review // Larry D. Kramer
Pubbl/distr/stampa	New York, : Oxford University Press, 2004
ISBN	1-280-53440-0 0-19-803782-1 0-19-530389-X
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (376 p.)
Disciplina	342.73
Soggetti	People (Constitutional law) - United States Constituent power - United States Judicial review - United States Electronic books.
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. 255-337) and index.
Nota di contenuto	In substance, and in principle, the same as it was heretofore : the customary constitution -- A rule obligatory upon every department : the origins of judicial review -- The power under the constitution will always be in the people : the making of the constitution -- Courts, as well as other departments, are bound by that instrument : accepting judicial review -- What every true republican ought to depend on : rejecting judicial supremacy -- Notwithstanding this abstract view : the changing context of constitutional law -- To preserve the constitution, as a perpetual bond of union : the lessons of experience -- A layman's document, not a lawyer's contract : the continuing struggle for popular constitutionalism -- As an American : popular constitutionalism, circa 2003 --Epilogue : judicial review without judicial supremacy.
Sommario/riassunto	In this interpretation of America's founding and of its entire system of judicial review, Larry Kramer reveals that the colonists fought for and birthed a very different system - and held a very different understanding of citizenship - than Americans believe to be the norm today.

