

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910450284603321
Autore	Weston Timothy B. <1964->
Titolo	The power of position [[electronic resource]] : Beijing University, intellectuals, and Chinese political culture, 1898-1929 // Timothy B. Weston
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Berkeley, : University of California Press, 2004
ISBN	9786612357077 1-282-35707-7 0-520-92990-X 1-59734-828-7
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (341 p.)
Collana	Berkeley series in interdisciplinary studies of China ; ; 3
Disciplina	379.51
Soggetti	Higher education and state - China - History Political culture - China - History Electronic books.
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Schools, politics, and reform in the nineteenth century -- The imperial university and late-Qing Beijing -- Instability and redefinition : the national university in the wake of the 1911 revolution -- Between the old culture and the new -- The insistent pull of politics -- Tensions within the May Fourth Movement -- National university under siege -- Epilogue : upholding the "Beida spirit".
Sommario/riassunto	Throughout the twentieth century, Beijing University (or Beida) has been at the center of China's greatest political and cultural upheavals--from the May Fourth Movement of 1919 to the Cultural Revolution of the 1960's to the tragic events in Tiananmen Square in 1989. Why this should be--how Beida's historical importance has come to transcend that of a mere institution of higher learning--is a question at the heart of this book. A study of intellectuals and political culture during the past century's tumultuous early decades, The Power of Position is the first to focus on Beida, China's oldest and best-known national university. Timothy B. Weston portrays the university as a key locus used by intellectuals to increase their influence in society. Weston analyzes the links between intellectuals' political and cultural commitments and their specific manner of living. He also compares Beijing's intellectual culture with that of the rising metropolis of Shanghai. What emerges is a remarkably nuanced and complex picture of life at China's leading university, especially in the decades leading up to the May Fourth Movement.
