Sommario/riassunto	Mass media ethics and the classical liberal ideal of the autonomous individual are historically linked and professionally dominant--yet the authors of this work feel this is intrinsically flawed. They show how recent research in philosophy and social science--together with a longer tradition in theological inquiry--insist that community, mutuality, and relationship are fundamental to a full concept of personhood. The authors argue that ""persons-in-community"" provides a more defensible grounding for journalists' professional moral decision-making in crucial areas such as truth-telling, privacy
