

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910450876003321
Autore	Drinkwater J. F
Titolo	The Alamanni and Rome 213-496 (Caracalla to Clovis) [[electronic resource] /] / John F. Drinkwater
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Oxford ; ; New York, : Oxford University Press, 2007
ISBN	1-281-15496-2 9786611154967 0-19-153777-2
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (421 p.)
Disciplina	937.004/39
Soggetti	Alemanni (Germanic people) Electronic books. Rome History Germanic Invasions, 3rd-6th centuries
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. [368]-389) and index.
Nota di contenuto	Prelude -- Arrival -- Settlement -- Society -- Service -- Conflict 285-355 -- Conflict 356-61 -- Conflict 365-94 -- The fifth century -- Appendix : the Lyon medallion.
Sommario/riassunto	A pioneering study of the Alamanni, one of the so-called barbarian tribes raiding the Roman Empire in the third century AD. John Drinkwater uses new archaeological and historical findings to trace their complex, and sometime surprising, relationship with the world of imperial Rome. - ;The Alamanni and Rome focuses upon the end of the Roman Empire. From the third century AD, barbarians attacked and then overran the west. Some - Goths, Franks, Saxons - are well known, others less so. The latter include the Alamanni, despite the fact that their name is found in the French ('Allemagne') and Spanis