

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910451102803321
Autore	Boyatzis Richard
Titolo	Competencies in the 21st Century [[electronic resource]]
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Bradford, : Emerald Group Publishing Limited, 2008
ISBN	1-281-38521-2 9786611385217 1-84663-741-4
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (163 p.)
Collana	Journal of Management Development - Volume 27, Edition 1
Disciplina	650.1/3
Soggetti	International business enterprises -- Management Electronic books.
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di contenuto	Cover; CONTENTS; EDITORIAL ADVISORY BOARD; Competencies in the 21st century; Social and emotional competencies predicting success for male and female executives; Characteristics that distinguish outstanding urban principals; Emotional intelligence competencies in the team and team leader; Identifying competencies that predict effectiveness of R&D managers; A 20-year view of trying to develop emotional, social and cognitive intelligence competencies in graduate management education; The impact of learning goals on emotional, social, and cognitive intelligence competency development The impact of social environments on emotional, social, and cognitive competency development The beat and rhythm of competency development over two years; Call for papers
Sommario/riassunto	This e-book is devoted to up-dating our understanding of competencies, how they drive performance and how they are developed. In it, the Guest Editor offers four articles showing the relationship between demonstrated emotional, social, and cognitive intelligence competencies and performance in various occupations, from bank executives to public school principals to R&D managers to military pilots. The Editor also offer four articles showing how these same competencies can be developed in adults.

