

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910451602903321
Autore	Newby Andrew
Titolo	Ireland, Radicalism, and the Scottish Highlands, 1870-1912 [[electronic resource]]
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Edinburgh, : Edinburgh University Press, c2007
ISBN	1-4744-7128-5 0-7486-3014-7 0-7486-5364-3 0-7486-7934-0 1-281-25207-7 9786611252076 1-4356-4353-4
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (233 p.)
Collana	Scottish Historical Review Monographs
Disciplina	128.46 333.30941150899162 941.081
Soggetti	Irish Love Crofters - History - 19th century - Highlands - Scotland Irish - History - Politics and government - 19th century - Scotland Land tenure - History - 19th century - Highlands - Scotland Land tenure - History - 19th century - Ireland Great Britain Regions & Countries - Europe History & Archaeology Electronic books.
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	COVER; COPYRIGHT; Contents; Acknowledgements; Abbreviations; chapter 1 Scotland, Ireland and the Land Question; chapter 2 'A Sort of Fenian Conclave in the Country': The Development of a Highland Land Question; chapter 3 'Blessed are Those who Expect Little, for They Shall not be Disappointed': Alleged and Actual Irish Involvement in the Development of the 'Crofters' War', 1877-1880; chapter 4 'An Obscure Hall in East Nile Street': Urban Radicalism and the 'Crofters' War', 1881-1882

chapter 5 'The Active Propaganda of Socialist Agitation': Strands of Land and Social Reform in Ireland and the Highlandschapter 6 'A Scotch Parnellite Party': Land, Home Rule and the Third Reform Act; chapter 7 'Two Tribes which Sprang from the Same Stock': Celtic Solidarity and Political Realignment in the Highlands, 1886-1895; chapter 8 'The Highlands have Reaped what Michael Davitt has Sown': Legislation and Agitation to the Great War; chapter 9 Conclusion; Bibliography; Index

Sommario/riassunto

This book focuses on the leading figures in radical politics in Ireland and Scottish highlands and explores the links between them. It deals with topics that have been at the centre of recent discussions on the Highland land question, the politics of the Irish community in Scotland, and the development of the labour movement in Scotland. The author argues that the Irish activists in the Scottish Highlands and in urban Scotland should be seen as adherents to notions of social and economic reform, such as land nationalisation, and not as Irish nationalists or Home Rulers. This leads him to make
