

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910452694903321
Autore	Ferrell Jeff
Titolo	Empire of Scrounge [[electronic resource]] : Inside the Urban Underground of Dumpster Diving, Trash Picking, and Street Scavenging
Pubbl/distr/stampa	New York, : NYU Press, 2005
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (233 p.)
Collana	Alternative Criminology Series
Disciplina	305.5/68/0973 305.5680973
Soggetti	Marginality, Social -- United States Ragpickers -- United States Salvage (Waste, etc.) -- United States United States -- Social conditions -- 1980- Electronic books.
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di contenuto	Contents; Acknowledgments; 1 Sordid Signs; 2 Street Life; 3 Street Knowledge; 4 Salvage Operations; 5 Scrapped Together; 6 Scrunge City; 7 Scrounging Zen; Coda: Improvisations on the Everyday; Notes; Index; About the Author
Sommario/riassunto	"Patrolling the neighborhoods of central Fort Worth, sorting through trash piles, exploring dumpsters, scanning the streets and the gutters for items lost or discarded, I gathered the city's degraded bounty, then returned home to sort and catalogue the take." -From the Introduction. In December of 2001 Jeff Ferrell quit his job as tenured professor, moved back to his hometown of Fort Worth, Texas, and, with a place to live but no real income, began an eight-month odyssey of essentially living off of the street. Empire of Scrounge tells the story of this unusual journey into the often illicit