

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910452984903321
Autore	Choudhury Barnali <1974->
Titolo	Public services and international trade liberalization : human rights and gender implications // Barnali Choudhury [[electronic resource]]
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Cambridge : , : Cambridge University Press, , 2012
ISBN	1-139-79428-0 1-139-88934-6 1-139-78381-5 1-139-78291-6 1-139-20809-8 1-139-77688-6 1-139-77992-3 1-283-74649-2 1-139-77840-4
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (xvi, 362 pages) : digital, PDF file(s)
Collana	Cambridge international trade and economic law
Disciplina	382/.92
Soggetti	Service industries - Law and legislation Investments, Foreign - Law and legislation Human rights Women's rights
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Title from publisher's bibliographic system (viewed on 05 Oct 2015).
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	International economic law and human rights -- Public services -- Instruments for liberalizing public services -- Liberalization of water services -- Liberalization of educational services -- Liberalization of health services -- Accounting for the differential implications of liberalized public services on developing countries and women -- Should public services continue to be liberalized?
Sommario/riassunto	Does public service liberalization pose a threat to gender and human rights? Traditionally considered essential services provided by a state to its citizens, public services are often viewed as public goods which embody social values. Subjecting them to market ideology thus raises concerns that the intrinsic social nature of these services will be negated. Moreover, as those most likely to be reliant on public services, public service liberalization may also further marginalize women. Nevertheless, states continue to increasingly liberalize public services. Barnali Choudhury explores the implications of public service liberalization. Using primarily a legal approach, but drawing from case studies, empirical research and gender theories, she examines whether liberalization under the General Agreement on Trade in Services and other liberalization vehicles such as preferential trade and investment agreements compromise human rights and gender objectives.
