

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910454603803321
Autore	Alexander June Granatir <1948->
Titolo	Ethnic pride, American patriotism [[electronic resource]] : Slovaks and other new immigrants in the interwar era // June Granatir Alexander
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Philadelphia, : Temple University Press, 2004
ISBN	1-282-50575-0 9786612505751 1-59213-780-6
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (296 p.)
Disciplina	973/.049187
Soggetti	Slovak Americans - Politics and government Slovak Americans - Ethnic identity East European Americans - Politics and government East European Americans - Ethnic identity Electronic books. United States Emigration and immigration History 20th century
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Contents; Preface and Acknowledgments; Introduction: Getting a Perspective on "New Immigrant" America; I. The Transatlantic Years: World War I to 1924; II. Turning Inward: 1924 Through World War II; Conclusion: Persistent Issues and New Perceptions; Abbreviations; Bibliographical Note; Notes; Index
Sommario/riassunto	In Ethnic Pride, American Patriotism, June Alexander presents a history of inter-war America from the perspective of new Slovak and Eastern European immigrant communities. Like the groups that preceded them, Slovak immigrants came to define being American as adhering to its political principles; they saw no contradiction between being patriotic Americans and maintaining pride in their ancestry. To counter the negative effects of the 1924 immigration law, Slovaks mobilized a variety of political and cultural activities to insure group survival and promote ethnic pride. In numerous I