| Sommario/riassunto      | Existing Online Public Access Catalogues (OPACs) demonstratedifferences in the range and complexity of their functional features,terminology, and help facilities. While many libraries already haveOPACs, there is a need to bring together, in the form of guidelines orrecommendations, a corpus of good practice to assist libraries indesigning or re-designing the displays for their OPACs, taking intoconsideration the needs of users. The audience for these guidelines islibrarians charged with customizing OPAC software and vendors andproducers of this software. The guidelines are mainly designed |
