

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910455189603321
Autore	Levine Robert S (Robert Steven), <1953->
Titolo	Dislocating race & nation [[electronic resource]] : episodes in nineteenth-century American literary nationalism // Robert S. Levine
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Chapel Hill, : University of North Carolina Press, c2008
ISBN	1-4696-0565-1 0-8078-8788-9
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (335 p.)
Disciplina	810.9/3581
Soggetti	American literature - 19th century - History and criticism National characteristics, American, in literature Literature and history - United States - History Nationalism and literature - United States - History American literature - 18th century - History and criticism Literature and society - History Race relations in literature Black nationalism in literature Electronic books.
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Undoings -- Charles Brockden Brown, Louisiana, and the contingencies of empire -- Circulating the nation: David Walker, the Missouri Compromise, and the appeals of black literary nationalism -- Genealogical fictions: Melville and Hannah crafts in Hawthorne's house -- Frederick Douglass's hemispheric nationalism, 1857-1893 -- Undoings redux.
Sommario/riassunto	American literary nationalism is traditionally understood as a cohesive literary tradition developed in the newly independent United States that emphasized the unique features of America and consciously differentiated American literature from British literature. Robert S. Levine challenges this assessment by exploring the conflicted, multiracial, and contingent dimensions present in the works of late eighteenth- and nineteenth-century American and African American writers. Conflict and uncertainty, not consensus, Levine argues, helped define American literary nationalism during this period. <B
