

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910455512503321
Autore	Putnam Lara
Titolo	The company they kept [[electronic resource]] : migrants and the politics of gender in Caribbean Costa Rica, 1870-1960 // Lara Putnam
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Chapel Hill, : University of North Carolina Press, c2002
ISBN	0-8078-6223-1
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (315 p.)
Disciplina	306.3/6/097286109034
Soggetti	Migrant agricultural laborers - Costa Rica - Puerto Limon - Social conditions Women - Costa Rica - Puerto Limon - Social conditions Black people - Costa Rica - Puerto Limon - Social conditions Sex role - Costa Rica - Puerto Limon - History Power (Social sciences) - Costa Rica - Puerto Limon - History Electronic books. Puerto Limon (Costa Rica) Social conditions Puerto Limon (Costa Rica) Economic conditions
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. 275-295) and index.
Nota di contenuto	The evolution of family practice in Jamaica and Costa Rica -- Sojourners and settlers : economic cycles and traveling lives, 1850s-1940s -- Las princesas del dollar : prostitutes and the banana booms, 1890s-1920s -- Companeros : communities and kinship, 1920s-1950s -- Facety women : rudeness and respectability, 1890s-1930s -- Men of respect : authority and violence, 1890s-1950s.
Sommario/riassunto	In the 19th century, migrants from the USA, across the Caribbean and beyond poured into Caribbean Central America, drawn by the established banana plantations and economic booms, creating a very mixed population. This work explores the effects of this change on gender, kinship and community.