Nota di contenuto	The legacy of the Herero genocide on Namibia today -- The legal implications of gross human rights and humanitarian law violations committed from the nineteenth century onward -- The developing norm of reparations and apologies for historical claims : past, present and future.
Sommario/riassunto	More and more, the descendants of indigenous victims of genocide, land expropriation, forced labor, and other systematic human rights violations committed by colonial powers are seeking reparations under international law from the modern successor governments and corporations. As the number of colonial reparations cases increases, courts around the world are being asked to apply international law to determine whether reparations are due for atrocities and crimes that might have been committed long ago but whose lasting effects are alleged to injure the modern descendants of the victims.
