

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910455911703321
Autore	Tamura Keiko <1955->
Titolo	Michi's memories [[electronic resource]] : the story of a Japanese war bride // Keiko Tamura
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Canberra, A.C.T., : Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies, Australian National University, 2001
ISBN	1-74076-066-2
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (118 p.)
Disciplina	304.8/94052 B
Soggetti	War brides - Australia - Social life and customs Japanese - Australia - Social life and customs Interracial marriage - Australia - Social life and customs Women immigrants - Australia - Social life and customs Electronic books. Australia Ethnic relations Australia Emigration and immigration
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. 98-100).
Nota di contenuto	Acknowledgements; Contents; Prologue; Chapter One: Encounters in Occupied Japan; Initial contacts of the locals with American occupation forces; BCOF and anti-fraternisation policy; Encounters under the anti-fraternisation policy; Australian servicemen s perception of Japanese women; Requests for marriages; Bringing the brides home; Women who were left behind; Chapter Two: Marrying an Australian Soldier; Michi s story; Chapter Three: Becoming an Australian Wife and Mother; Japanese immigrants in Australia before the arrival of war brides; Assimilation policy for immigrants; Michi s story Chapter Four: Later YearsMichi s story; War bride conventions; The term "war bride" [senso hanayome]; Michi's perception of the term "senso hanayome"; International marriage; War, Peace and My Life; Chapter Five: Children s Views; Sam s childhood; Name SumikoŽ; The eldest child; Epilogue: Personal Reflections ... Keiko Tamura; Endnotes; Selected References;

Sommario/riassunto

The story of a Japanese war bride. Michi tells of the difficulties war brides faced in Australia when general hostility towards Japan as an enemy nation was still strong.
