

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910456417003321
Autore	Finkel Alvin
Titolo	The social credit phenomenon in Alberta / / Alvin Finkel
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Toronto, [Ontario] ; ; Buffalo, [New York] ; ; London, [England] : , : University of Toronto Press, , 1989 ©1989
ISBN	1-282-03973-3 9786612039737 1-4426-8238-8
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (295 p.)
Collana	State and Economic Life ; ; 12
Disciplina	324.27105097123
Soggetti	Political parties - Alberta Electronic books.
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Includes index.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references.
Nota di contenuto	Frontmatter -- Contents -- Acknowledgments -- Preface -- 1. The Social Credit Phenomenon -- 2. Alberta Society at the Time of Social Credit's Appearance -- 3. The Schizophrenic Period: Social Credit's First Term, 1935-1940 -- 4. The Transformation: Social Credit during the War -- 5. A Hot Economy and a Cold War: Social Credit, 1945-1960 -- 6. Defending Jerusalem and Spreading the Gospel: The Late Manning Period -- 7. The Road to Disintegration -- 8. Social Credit and the Debate about 'Populism' -- 9. Conclusion -- Notes -- Index -- Backmatter
Sommario/riassunto	Few parties in political history have had such a swift metamorphosis from one end of the political spectrum to the other as did the Social Credit Party of Alberta. Between its establishment in the 1930s and the defeat of the Social Credit government in 1971, the party changed from a movement-based reformist organization to a cliquish, religious-oriented outfit whose main purpose was to hold the levers of power. In this account of the Social Credit transformation, Alvin Finkel challenges earlier works which focus purely on Social Credit monetary fixations and religiosity. He argues that the early party is best seen as a coalition of reformers, including working-class social democrats, the unemployed, small business owners, and farmers placed in jeopardy by the Depression. In its first term of office, Social Credit was perceived as on the left, opposed in the 1940 provincial election by a right-wing coalition. During the later Aberhart years, and especially after Ernest Manning's accession to the premiership, Social Credit switched its fire from bankers to socialists and the party's rhetoric became extremely right-wing. Manning opposed, on ideological grounds, most of the social programs introduced by federal government after 1945. Though patronage was rife, most Albertans regarded Social Credit as righteous because of the leadership of Manning, a radio evangelist. Only Manning's departure from the political scene began the slow process of decay of the governing party.

2. Record Nr.	UNINA9910974639303321
Autore	Stead Alan
Titolo	Information rights in practice : the non-legal professional's guide // Alan Stead
Pubbl/distr/stampa	London : , : Facet, , 2008
ISBN	9781856049931 1856049930
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (xx, 203 pages) : digital, PDF file(s)
Disciplina	342.410662
Soggetti	Freedom of information - Great Britain Government information - Great Britain Public records - Law and legislation - Great Britain Data protection - Law and legislation - Great Britain
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Title from publisher's bibliographic system (viewed on 05 Jul 2018).
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Introduction -- Data protection act of 1988 -- Definitions of personal data -- The scope of the Data Protection Act -- The data protection principles -- Access to personal data -- Data sharing -- The Freedom of Information Act 2000 and Environmental Information Regulations 2004, SI 2004/3391 -- Scope of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 and the Environmental Information Regulations 2004 -- Application of exemptions and exceptions -- The public interest test -- Publication schemes -- Compliance, the Information Commissioner and the Information Tribunal -- Disclosure logs -- Records management -- Section 46 code of practice -- Other legislation -- Interaction of the legislation -- Summary.

Sommario/riassunto

Overstretched professionals in every public authority are grappling with the chalk face implications of a raft of legislation relating to information use. This is the first book to offer a single point of reference and advice, which can be understood by the non-legal professional. The requirements of the relevant legislation are set out together with examples, flow-charts, and diagrams to illustrate and clarify how to apply the law in practice. This indispensable guide is a one-stop shop for all you need to know about information rights law, using relevant case studies to clarify and illuminate these tricky issues. Contents include: Data Protection Act 1998 - definitions of personal data; scope of the Act; the principles; access to personal data and data sharing; and, Freedom of Information Act 2000 and the Environmental Information Regulations 2004 - scope of the Acts; applications of exemptions/exceptions; public interest tests, publication schemes; and, disclosure logs and records management. It also includes: Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000; Human Rights Act 1998; Re-use of Public Sector Information Regulations 2005; other non-information rights-related legislation; interaction of legislation; and, requests for information. A must-have for anyone working with information rights in public authorities and the private sector, this book is also a useful reference point for legal advisers, academics and students of information rights, as well as media professionals wanting to learn and understand how public authorities approach requests for information and the surrounding procedures.
