

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910458142003321
Autore	Kropp Dakubu M. E (Mary Esther)
Titolo	Korle meets the sea [[electronic resource]] : a sociolinguistic history of Accra // M.E. Kropp Dakubu
Pubbl/distr/stampa	New York, : Oxford University Press, 1997
ISBN	1-280-52421-9 0-19-534518-5
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (235 p.)
Disciplina	306.4409667 306.44609667
Soggetti	Multilingualism - Ghana - Accra Electronic books. Accra (Ghana) Languages
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. 183-197) and index.
Nota di contenuto	Contents; 1. A Dispute, a Saying, and Some Theory; 2. Multilingualism and the West African City; 3. Modern Multilingual Accra I; 4. Modern Multilingual Accra II; 5. To the Sea: The Formation of the Ga Language Community; 6. Upstream, Inland: Other People's Languages; 7. Beyond the Sea: Exotic Languages; 8. Flood Control: The Dynamics of Multilingualism; Notes; References; Index
Sommario/riassunto	For centuries, Accra, the capital of Ghana, has been a linguistic anomaly that contains 44 indigenous languages, of which most members of its population speak at least two, Using linguistic, historical, and ethnographic techniques, Dakubu explores the origins and durability of this multilingualism and how it has affected Ghanaian society.