

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910463140203321
Autore	Naseef Robert A.
Titolo	Autism in the family : caring and coping together / / by Robert A. Naseef, Ph.D., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Baltimore : , : Paul H. Brookes Publishing Company, , [2013] ©2013
ISBN	1-59857-629-1 1-59857-370-5
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (604 p.)
Disciplina	618.92/85882
Soggetti	Autistic children - Family relationships Father and child Electronic books.
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	My story -- The emotional journey: from lost dreams and chronic stress to acceptance -- Understanding autism -- Starting over and falling in love again -- Understanding and guiding your child's behavior -- Surfing your stress: one wave at a time -- Parents and professionals: a partnership in child development -- Big boys don't cry: the secret life of men -- Ordinary couples, challenged relationships: another developmental process -- A different perspective: understanding siblings -- Family and friends: finding and building circles of support -- Adolescence -- Adulthood -- Reflections on peace of mind and happiness.
Sommario/riassunto	How can parents provide the best support for their child with autism- and ensure that the whole family's needs are met? It's a question faced by every parent of a child on the autism spectrum, and this book answers it with keen insight, reassuring honesty, and practical guidance. A psychologist and father of an adult son with autism, Dr. Robert Naseef has both personal and professional expertise to share with overwhelmed families. Weaving wisdom from years of clinical practice with candid first-hand insights on parenting a child from birth through adulthood, Naseef helps parents navigate t

