Record Nr. UNINA9910464103503321 Autore David Roman Titolo Lustration and transitional justice [[electronic resource]]: personnel systems in the Czech Republic, Hungary, and Poland / / Roman David Philadelphia,: University of Pennsylvania Press, c2011 Pubbl/distr/stampa ISBN 1-283-89691-5 0-8122-0576-6 Edizione [1st ed.] Descrizione fisica 1 online resource (327 p.) Collana Pennsylvania Studies in Human Rights Pennsylvania studies in human rights Disciplina 320.9437 Soggetti Political purges - Czech Republic Political purges - Hungary Political purges - Poland Democratization - Czech Republic Democratization - Hungary Democratization - Poland Transitional justice - Czech Republic Transitional justice - Hungary Transitional justice - Poland Electronic books. Czech Republic Politics and government 1993-Hungary Politics and government 1989-Poland Politics and government 1989-

Lingua di pubblicazione Inglese

Formato Materiale a stampa

Livello bibliografico Monografia

Note generali Bibliographic Level Mode of Issuance: Monograph

Nota di bibliografia Includes bibliographical references (p. [243]-300) and index.

Nota di contenuto pt. I. Personnel systems and transitional justice -- pt. II. Lustration systems in central Europe -- pt. III. Experimental evidence.

Sommario/riassunto How do transitional democracies deal with officials who have been tainted by complicity with prior governments? Should they be excluded or should they be incorporated into the new system? In Lustration and

Transitional Justice, Roman David examines major institutional innovations that developed in Central Europe following the collapse of communist regimes. While the Czech Republic approved a lustration (vetting) law based on the traditional method of dismissals. Hungary and Poland devised alternative models that granted their tainted officials a second chance in exchange for truth. David classifies personnel systems as exclusive, inclusive, and reconciliatory; they are based on dismissal, exposure, and confession, respectively, and they represent three major classes of transitional justice. David argues that in addition to their immediate purposes, personnel systems carry symbolic meanings that help explain their origin and shape their effects. In their effort to purify public life, personnel systems send different ideological messages that affect trust in government and the social standing of former adversaries. Exclusive systems may establish trust at the expense of reconciliation, while inclusive and reconciliatory systems may promote both trust and reconciliation. In spite of its importance, the topic of inherited personnel has received only limited attention in research on transitional justice and democratization. Lustration and Transitional Justice is the first attempt to fill this gap. Combining insights from cultural sociology and political psychology with the analysis of original experiments, historical surveys, parliamentary debates, and interviews, the book shows how perceptions of tainted personnel affected the origin of lustration systems and how dismissal, exposure, and confession affected trust in government, reconciliation, and collective memory.