Sommario/riassunto

The Luwians inhabited Anatolia and Syria in late second through early first millennium BC. They are mainly known through their Indo-European language, preserved on cuneiform tablets and hieroglyphic stelae. However, where the Luwians lived or came from, how they coexisted with their Hittite and Greek neighbors, and the peculiarities of their religion and material culture, are all debatable matters. A conference convened in Reading in June 2011 in order to discuss the current state of the debate, summarize points of disagreement, and outline ways of addressing them in future research. The papers presented at this conference were collected in the present volume, whose goal is to bring into being a new interdisciplinary field, Luwian Studies. 'To conclude, the editors of this volume on Luwian identities and the authors of the individual papers are to be congratulated with a successful sequel to The Luwians of 2003 edited by Melchert and with yet another substantial brick in the foundation of the incipient discipline of Luwian studies.' Titolo	The looking-glasse for malignants, enlarged. Or, The second part of Gods hand against God-haters [[electronic resource]] : Containing a most true and terrible augmentation and continuation of Gods immediately evident and eminent personall judgements fearfully inflicted on malevolent malignants, and unreasonable resisters of the most glorious worke of reformation, and of all the most pious and prudent proceedings of our present most renowned Parliament. The like (I believe) for number, nature, and time, not to be paralleld or pattern'd (to those of the first, and these of this second Looking-glasse) in any former age or history whatsoever. Wherein is also contained a most exact and true relation, especially, of that most remarkable and terrible judgement on the cavaliers drinking a health to the Devill, in an inne in Salisbury: and a briefe description of Malignants-Hall, at Bartholmews the lesse, in London. // Collected for Gods due glory, and malignants just shame; by John Vicars
