

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910467724503321
Titolo	Medieval Bosnia and south-east European relations : political, religious, and cultural life at the Adriatic crossroads // edited by Dženan Dautovi, Emir O. Filipovi, and Neven Isailovi [[electronic resource]]
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Leeds : , : Arc Humanities Press, , 2019
ISBN	1-64189-023-1
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (159 pages) : digital, PDF file(s)
Collana	Beyond medieval Europe
Disciplina	949.74201
Soggetti	Bosnia and Herzegovina History To 1463 Bosnia and Herzegovina History 1463-1878 Bosnia and Herzegovina Foreign relations Balkan Peninsula History Balkan Peninsula Foreign relations
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Title from publisher's bibliographic system (viewed on 20 Nov 2020).
Nota di contenuto	Introduction / Dženan Dautovi, Emir O. Filipovi, and Neven Isailovi -- Bosnia and Croatia-Dalmatia in the late Middle Ages : a historical perspective / Neven Isailovi -- Relations between the Bosnian Kingdom and the Serbian Despotate in a regional context / Enes Dedi -- The opposition between Bulgaria and the Latin Empire of Constantinople : a necessary hostility? / Francesco Dall'Aglio -- Ottoman power holders in the Balkans (1353-1580) : a case of upward and downward elite mobility / Güne Iksel -- Exploiting the frontier -- a case study : the common endeavour of Matthias Corvinus and Nicholas of Ilok in late medieval Bosnia / Davor Salihovi -- The papacy and marriage practices in medieval Bosnia / Dženan Dautovi -- Ecclesiastical reformer and politician : the two faces of Bishop Stephen II of Zagreb, 1225-1247 / Igor Razum.
Sommario/riassunto	As a small, landlocked country, medieval Bosnia managed to preserve its individuality, characterized by religious plurality and by the persistence of its own ancient customs. But its central position in the region, situated between east and west, and between Catholic and Orthodox Christianity, meant it was heavily influenced, both politically and culturally by the Venetian Republic, the Hungarian Kingdom, and the Byzantine Empire. Due to language issues and scarcity of sources, this region has largely been overlooked by western historiography. This volume features contributions from an exciting new generation of medievalists, who are working to rectify this gap in the narrative.
