

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910480713403321
Autore	Slater Kellee
Titolo	How to do a liver transplant [[electronic resource]] : stories from a surgical life // Kellee Slater
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Sydney, : NewSouth, 2013
ISBN	1-74224-643-5 1-74224-148-4
Edizione	[1st ed.]
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (300 p.)
Disciplina	617.092
Soggetti	Liver - Transplantation - Government policy - Australia Liver - Transplantation - Australia Surgeons - Australia Electronic books.
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di contenuto	Front Cover ; About the Author ; Copyright ; Contents; Prologue; I was born to be a general surgeon; You might get into medical school, you know; What body part is that?; Girls shouldn't do surgery; I heart gallbladders; It seems that I'm a doctor now; I can't believe they are going to let me operate on people; The life of a surgical registrar; In the poo; The call of the bile; Rocky Mountain High; You want me to start at what time?; Kellee, there is a donor; How a donor is done; We have found a new liver for you; How to do a liver transplant; Born in the USA Do you think I could have a piece of your liver?Love you Lynn; Transplant Mom; A fully fledged surgeon at last; Give me the gun, this liver's coming out; We will not let your daughter die; Buy a bra, save a child; Transplanting babies; You have three months to live; How do you do it all?; Acknowledgments; References
Sommario/riassunto	<P style=""MARGIN: 0in 0in 0pt"" class=MsoNormal>As a female surgeon, Dr. Kellee Slater works in one of the most demanding areas of medical operations, liver transplantation. In this inspiring, heartbreaking, and darkly humorous memoir, she opens up the fast-paced world of donor surgery. She takes readers with her as she flies across the Rocky Mountains in winter to collect transplant organs, rushes out of a department store change room to save the life of a toddler who is choking to death, and, horrifyingly, tells the wrong father in a hospital waiting room that there is no hope for his daughter.
