Sommario/riassunto	La tentation du reportage destiné à la grande presse n'a épargné presque aucun des écrivains des années trente : Carco, Cocteau, Cendrars, Soupault, Simenon, Kessel, Malraux et combien d'autres encore, se sont lancés, sous le patronage de la figure mythique d'Albert Londres, dans le genre incertain de l'enquête, pour le plus grand plaisir des lecteurs du Matin, de Paris-Soir ou de Voilà. Phénomène aussi remarquable que méconnu de la vie culturelle de l'Entre-deux-guerres, la vogue de l'écrivain-reporter soulève quelquesunes des questions essentielles que se pose alors la littérature, à mi-chemin du livre et du journal, de l'écriture et de l'action.

Sommario/riassunto	In present book, an analysis of the literature pertaining to parametric and non-parametric descriptions of surface topography in basics manufacturing processes (e.g., turning, milling, grinding) has been performed. The book focuses on the improvement of machining processes, with particular attention to the functional properties of surfaces, and, also, in the control of process parameters by a selected group of parameters. Here, the specific areas of interest are: surface topography analysis; advanced manufacturing metrology; surface metrology; measurement science; and measurement systems. The proposed approach of the description of surface for the functional properties of surfaces leads to the control of the whole manufacturing process, reduction of production cost by eliminating manufacturing defects and energy consumption, as well as the improvements of surface quality. The study presented in the book is a compendium of knowledge regarding surface metrology and emerging aim in a novel scientific approach.
